

A- Read the following text then do the tasks below:

A surgical nurse assists the surgeons. A very important part of the job is getting the patient ready for the operation. He also helps to prepare the operating room, making sure that it is clean and that all the things the surgeon needs for the operation are there. During the surgery, he helps the surgeon by passing him/her the surgical tools needed for the operation. He also keeps an eye on the patient to make sure that he is in a stable condition, keeping a constant check on the patient's heart rate, blood pressure and breathing. When the surgery is over, he counts the surgical tools so that none go missing during the operation. After the surgery, he has to change the patients' bandages and makes sure that he gives the right painkillers while they are recovering. So really, he is there at the beginning and at the end of their hospital treatment.

B- Read the following text then do the tasks below:

To ancient travellers, arriving at a city was an incredible experience. They would see huge walls rising up. People came and went through gates – in times of war, the gates were closed. The architecture of cities tells us about the climate. Streets were built so they were cooled by winds, or protected people from sun and rain. All cities have a network of streets, so people, goods, water and information can flow easily. Modern cities have wide roads, fast tramways and underground trains. But early cities had narrow streets. Without laws and rules, many cities would become dangerous and difficult to control. In ancient cities, a ruler controlled many aspects of life. All citizens had to obey the rules of the city. Modern cities have police, courts and prisons to control criminals, but even early cities made laws about how people should live.
